On April 25th, 2024, UPNEDA and the EEB cell collaborated with the Faculty of Architecture, Planning and Design, Integral University at Lucknow to conduct a one-day training program on UPECBC 2018 for architecture students. The session, held from 10:30 am to 2:00 pm, aimed to promote sustainable practices in architecture beyond the focus on solar panels.

The training program covered a wide range of topics related to sustainable architecture, including the integration of green building materials, waste management strategies, energy-efficient design principles, and water conservation techniques. Experts from UPNEDA and the EEB cell provided insights into government initiatives supporting sustainable architecture and encouraged students to incorporate eco-friendly solutions into their designs.

The interactive session engaged students in discussions and workshops, encouraging them to explore innovative approaches to sustainable architecture. Case studies and real-world examples were shared to inspire students and showcase successful implementations of sustainable practices in architectural design, such as passive cooling techniques, natural lighting optimization, and green roofs.

Overall, the training program provided valuable insights and practical knowledge to students, empowering them to become advocates for holistic sustainability in their future architectural projects. It emphasized the importance of minimizing environmental impact, maximizing energy efficiency, and promoting overall well-being through thoughtful design and construction practices.

The workshop was successfully coordinated by Ar. Khurram Ashraf, Ar. Shweta Verma, Ar. Tariq ul Islam & Ar. Shubham Singh who made the event interactive and lively throughout the session.
